This event was of great historical significance not only for the region, but also at the international level. In fact, the adoption of the resolution marked the beginning of a new stage in the development of the Central Asian countries, which are becoming a single region with clear goals.
For the first time, the initiative to adopt this resolution in the interests of Uzbekistan was put forward by the President of our country Shavkat Mirziyoyev at the 72nd session of the UN General Assembly, held in September 2017 in New York. In his speech, the head of Uzbekistan announced the holding of a high-level international conference on Central Asia under the auspices of the United Nations in Samarkand in November 2017, following which he proposed to adopt a special resolution of the Central Asian States in support of their efforts to ensure security and strengthen regional cooperation [11].

The approval of the document means international recognition of the new foreign policy pursued by official Tashkent. At the heart of this policy, as noted by Shavkat Mirziyoyev, is the goal of turning Central Asia into a sustainable, economically developed region.
